COVID-19 Medical Policy and Preparedness Plans

All businesses, small and large, will be faced with the extraordinary task of running operations amid the COVID-19 pandemic. Some states have required businesses to establish preparedness plans and policies to meet CDC, OSHA, and state guidelines related to limiting COVID-19 exposure to employees and customers.

Does your organization have a COVID-19 medical preparedness plan? How should you know what to include that is best for your operations?

That is where VIGILINT comes in. Our team of physicians with prior experience in the CDC, US Departments of Homeland Security and Health & Human Services, US Intelligence Community, National Security Staff, major US corporations, and in medical academia are here to help.

Existing COVID-19 Policy Review

Our team of operation analysts, intelligence staff and physicians review businesses' existing COVID-19 policies to ensure that CDC, OSHA and state guidelines are included. The review can include additional medical direction to ensure that the policies work within business' operations.

COVID-19 Policy Creation

Our team of operation analysts, intelligence staff and physicians develop policies regarding awareness, prevention, management and hygiene practices that align with CDC, OSHA and applicable state guidelines for COVID-19. These policies can include on-site testing protocols.

Marketing and Monthly Reports

Our marketing teams and operations analysts can also provide internal and external-facing packaging, as well as monthly intelligence reports on the latest developments surrounding COVID-19 that are pertinent to your business.
